The National Trails System Act of October 2, 1968 (Public Law 90-543), as amended, provides for four classes of trails: national recreation trails, national scenic trails, national historic trails, and connecting or side trails that provide additional points of public access to the other classes of trails.

This guide is designed to list and briefly describe, by state, the national recreation trails that have been designated and to provide the addresses where additional information may be obtained.

While national scenic and national historic trails can only be authorized and designated by an act of Congress, national recreation trails may be established by the secretary of the interior or by the secretary of agriculture. Establishment of national recreation trails on other federal lands and on state, local, or private lands is effected with the consent of, and upon application from, the agency or party having jurisdiction over the land.

The National Trails System Act directed the secretaries of the interior and agriculture to encourage states and local governments, as well as private interests, to establish trails on lands in or near urban areas and directed the secretary of housing and urban development to encourage the planning of recreation trails in connection with urban recreation and transportation planning.

Except for applications from the U.S. Forest Service and the land-managing agencies of the Department of the Interior, applications for national recreation trail designation should be submitted to the regional office of the National Park Service serving the trail locale (see list of NPS regional office addresses and their jurisdictions in the front of this booklet). Applications for national recreation trail designation may be obtained from the region serving your state.

The National Park Service provides technical assistance to any agency desiring to designate a national recreation trail on its lands or waters. The Park Service also maintains the nationwide inventory of national recreation trails, which is computerized on a data base for easy retrieval and updating. This inventory is maintained by the Recreation Resources Assistance Division (code 765), National Park Service, P.O. Box 37127, Washington, D.C. 20013-7127.

As the nation's principal conservation agency, the Department of the Interior has basic responsibilities to protect and conserve our land and water, energy and minerals, fish and wildlife, parks and recreation areas, and to ensure the wise use of all these resources. The department also has major responsibility for American Indian reservation communities and for people who live in island territories under U.S. administration.

Publication services were provided by the graphics and editorial staffs of the Denver Service Center. NPS 2204A July 1985
